- Create a presentation with elements such as history, key artists, and signature characteristics.
- Class presentations and peer feedback.
- Students compose an original piece based on the style they researched.
- Collaboration in small groups for feedback.
- Final performance in front of the class.

Implementation Strategy:

• Field Projects: Music students will engage in field projects that respond to local community needs, such as organizing concerts for public health awareness, creating music workshops for

- underserved youth, or collaborating with schools to enhance musical education programs. These initiatives will be supervised by faculty and local music mentors, ensuring that students receive ongoing guidance and constructive feedback throughout the creative process.
- Community Partnerships: We will establish collaborations with local music organizations, NGOs focused on arts education, and government cultural bodies to provide students with a wide array of opportunities for musical engagement and learning. These partnerships will help identify significant areas where students can use their musical talents to make a positive impact, such as community music events or fundraising performances.
- Workshops and Training: Regular workshops and training sessions will be offered to equip students with essential skills and knowledge for effective community engagement through music. Topics will include music production, song writing, music entrepreneurship, and leadership in arts programming. These sessions will empower students to become effective advocates for music in their communities.
- Assessment and Reflection: Students will be encouraged to reflect on their musical experiences through presentations, performance critiques, and discussions. This reflective practice will enable them to critically analyze their musical contributions and assess their impact on the community, fostering a deeper understanding of the role of music in social change and community well-being.

Assessment:

- Field Diary: Each student is required to maintain a Field Diary where they will document their readings from related literature, e-content, and reflections from field visits related to their music projects. This diary will serve as a personal log of their learning journey, capturing insights on community music practices, cultural contexts, and the theoretical frameworks they explore in music education. Students are encouraged to include notes on community interactions, feedback from mentors, and personal reflections on their experiences.
- Participation in Field Visits (30%): Active engagement during field visits is crucial for understanding the community's musical context and needs. Students will be assessed on their attendance, contributions to discussions, and practical involvement in activities during these visits. This component emphasizes the importance of firsthand experiences in music education.
- Group Field Project (40%): Students will collaborate in groups to design and implement a music-related field project that addresses a specific community need. The assessment will focus on creativity, execution, teamwork, and the overall impact of the project. Students will also be evaluated on how well they incorporate their learnings from the Field Diary into the project.
- Presentation of Field Project Findings (30%): Following the completion of the field project, students will present their findings to the community institution involved in the project. This presentation will be assessed based on clarity, engagement with the audience, the effectiveness of communication, and the articulation of the project's outcomes. The ability to reflect on the learning process and its implications for future music initiatives will also be considered in the grading.
